

BSIS: Leadership and Management

The Bachelor of Science in Integrated Studies: Leadership and Management combines the study of group and organizational cultures with a focus on how to develop and implement successful management strategies. Course work provides a foundation in leadership studies, strategic planning and finance. Students learn theories of leadership and team management while gaining essential, practical skills for successfully planning, implementing and evaluating strategies in various organizational settings.

The program prepares students for leadership roles in business, governmental and nonprofit organizations that need experts in organizational dynamics, including how to successfully engage with stakeholders and leverage internal and community resources.
