Executive Master of Business Administration (MBA)

Washington University's Executive MBA (EMBA) program provides a holistic approach to managing people, projects and budgets. During the 20-month program, classes meet monthly for three-day sessions (with the exception of three residencies (https://olin.wustl.edu/EN-US/executive-programs/executive-mba/academics/residencies/Pages/residencies.aspx)). Washington University's EMBA team takes care of securing a student's textbooks, course materials, meals and on-campus parking passes.

The EMBA program requires 60 credit units for graduation. Course work and residencies focus on leadership development. Our values-based, data-driven approach to leadership is woven through the EMBA program curriculum, from GO! Week through the final capstone project. Students meet with certified executive leadership coaches throughout the program — and even afterward — to develop a personalized, actionable leadership plan built around their own higher-purpose statement. The EMBA program also includes a data-driven decision-making course to help leaders understand the ways technology affects business and how to build teams that harness the power of technology and data.
