1. Historical requirements

- Three historical courses, covering three of the following five historical periods in American, British, or Anglophone literature and including at least one course from each of the following two groups:

Group 1

- Medieval
- Early Modern

Group 2

- The 18th Century
- The 19th Century
- The 20th Century and Later

2. One course centered on either global or minority literatures

At least one 300- or 400-level literature course must be taken in one of the following areas:

- Global literatures in English, defined as the Anglophone literatures of Africa, the Caribbean, South Asia, and other non-British or non-U.S. territories
- Minority literatures of the United States or the United Kingdom, which include Anglophone African American, Asian American, Native American, Latinx, and Black British writing.

Each semester, official course listings will designate the courses selected by the English Department Curriculum Committee that may be chosen to meet this requirement. Courses applied to this requirement may also satisfy other English major requirements involving historical range (requirement 1) and the need to complete two 400-level courses (requirement 4).

3. Publishing electives

Two additional courses focusing on publishing, drawn from inside and outside the department. These electives require approval from the director of the Publishing Specialization.

4. Portfolio capstone

All majors are required to complete a portfolio capstone project, for which the student provides a 200-level paper, a 400-level paper, and a brief essay (two to three pages) that reflects on the student's overall learning experience in the major.

Additional Information

- Only one cross-listed course not home-based in English may be counted toward the 21 units required. The two required 400-level courses must be home-based in English.

- 3 units of 300- or 400-level courses in the literature of a language other than English may be counted toward the English major.
- Before the end of their junior year, majors are encouraged to consult with advisors regarding the fulfillment of major requirements.
